

COLUMBO QUESTIONS

- 1. What do you mean by that?
- 2. How did you come to that conclusion?*
- 3. Have you ever considered the implications of your view?

COLUMBO QUESTIONS

- 1. What do you mean by that?
- 2. How did you come to that conclusion?*
- 3. Have you ever considered the implications of your view?

COLUMBO QUESTIONS

- 1. What do you mean by that?
- 2. How did you come to that conclusion?*
- 3. Have you ever considered the implications of your view?

*A variation when confronted by claims like, "Meat is murder," is to ask, "Says who?" Or, "What makes you right?" The purpose being, to move the person to understand there's no right or wrong without God saying it is.

COLUMBO QUESTIONS

- 1. What do you mean by that?
- 2. How did you come to that conclusion?*
- 3. Have you ever considered the implications of your view?

COLUMBO QUESTIONS

- 1. What do you mean by that?
- 2. How did you come to that conclusion?*
- 3. Have you ever considered the implications of your view?

COLUMBO QUESTIONS

- 1. What do you mean by that?
- 2. How did you come to that conclusion?*
- 3. Have you ever considered the implications of your view?

COLUMBO QUESTIONS

- 1. What do you mean by that?
- 2. How did you come to that conclusion?*
- 3. Have you ever considered the implications of your view?

COLUMBO QUESTIONS

- 1. What do you mean by that?
- 2. How did you come to that conclusion?*
- 3. Have you ever considered the implications of your view?

COLUMBO QUESTIONS

- 1. What do you mean by that?
- 2. How did you come to that conclusion?*
- 3. Have you ever considered the implications of your view?

COLUMBO QUESTIONS

- 1. What do you mean by that?
- 2. How did you come to that conclusion?*
- 3. Have you ever considered the implications of your view?

COLUMBO QUESTIONS

- 1. What do you mean by that?
- 2. How did you come to that conclusion?*
- 3. Have you ever considered the implications of your view?

COLUMBO QUESTIONS

- 1. What do you mean by that?
- 2. How did you come to that conclusion?*
- 3. Have you ever considered the implications of your view?

*A variation when confronted by claims like, "Meat is murder," is to ask, "Says who?"
Or, "What makes you right?" The purpose being, to move the person to understand there's no right or wrong without God saying it is.

*A variation when confronted by claims like, "Meat is murder," is to ask, "Says who?"

Or, "What makes you right?" The purpose being, to move the person to understand there's no right or wrong without God saying it is.

*A variation when confronted by claims like, "Meat is murder," is to ask, "Says who?"
Or, "What makes you right?" The purpose being, to move the person to understand there's no right or wrong without God saying it is.

*A variation when confronted by claims like, "Meat is murder," is to ask, "Says who?"
Or, "What makes you right?" The purpose being, to move the person to understand there's no right or wrong without God saying it is.

*A variation when confronted by claims like, "Meat is murder," is to ask, "Says who?"

Or, "What makes you right?" The purpose being, to move the person to understand there's no right or wrong without God saying it is.

*A variation when confronted by claims like, "Meat is murder," is to ask, "Says who?" Or, "What makes you right?" The purpose being, to move the person to understand there's no right or wrong without God saying it is.

*A variation when confronted by claims like, "Meat is murder," is to ask, "Says who?" Or, "What makes you right?" The purpose being, to move the person to understand there's no right or wrong without God saying it is.

*A variation when confronted by claims like, "Meat is murder," is to ask, "Says who?"

Or, "What makes you right?" The purpose being, to move the person to understand there's no right or wrong without God saying it is.

*A variation when confronted by claims like, "Meat is murder," is to ask, "Says who?"
Or, "What makes you right?" The purpose being, to move the person to understand there's no right or wrong without God saying it is.

*A variation when confronted by claims like, "Meat is murder," is to ask, "Says who?"

Or, "What makes you right?" The purpose being, to move the person to understand there's no right or wrong without God saying it is.

*A variation when confronted by claims like, "Meat is murder," is to ask, "Says who?"

Or, "What makes you right?" The purpose being, to move the person to understand there's no right or wrong without God saying it is.